

- Graduates will be able to design, prototype and test modern electronics and telecommunication engineering systems as per the specifications for the professional achievement in an industry and organizations.
- Graduates will be able to analyze and research appropriate technologies for implementation of the electronics and telecommunication engineering systems and exhibits the soft skills for the presentation of the systems.
- Graduates will be able to understand the social and environmental aspects of designed electronics and telecommunication systems.